In 2012 Henk Schiffmacher founded the Blue Bone Society to protect and enlarge his extensive collection of tattoo objects. Unfortunately the museum closed since March 2013 and now we're working on a new location to start over again. You can become a member of the Blue Bone Society to support the Amsterdam Tattoo Museum. We proudly adopted the name Blue Bone because this is the name the North African people gave to those who are tattooed. A nickname for the Coptic society who wear tattoo as a pride in their hide. Tattoo as a mark of distinction, a mark of civilisation. If you are more than just a tattooed person, if you think your tattoos are more than just cool, if you have pride in your hide, join our ranks and help us to conserve, collect and continue to grow.
